FOR THE GAZETTE OF THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. FENNO,

IT appears by the vote of the assembly of Virginia, respecting the conduct of Mr. Jefferson, while governor of that state, that "there had been popular rumours against him, which had gained some "degree of credence by more pointed accusations, "and which had rendered it necessary to make an "enquiry into his conduct."

The accusation was that, on the approach of a few British troopers, the governor of Virginia, betrayed a want of firmness, and, by his flight, caused great injury to the state in the loss of records, &c. The verdict of the assembly of Virginia, departing altogether from the charge, acquits Mr. Jefferson of that of which he had not been accused, namely, want of ability and integrity, but gives no verdict on the charge of want of firmness. This is not unlike the proceeding of some masters, when they give a character to a discharged servant who has been dismissed for drunkenness, and whom they describe as having been very faithful, industrious and honest. This assembly of Virginia has been at all times remarkable for their votes of thanks. The late Richard Henry Lee, a senator in congress from that state, had acquired the severe displeasure of al the republicans in Virginia, (and we know that it abounds with them) for having proposed in the senate in the first session the title of his highness for the President of the United States. It was never ascertained whether he was sincere in making the motion, or only wished to disparage the federal constitution by such a manœuvre. Certain however it is that he lost his former popularity in Virginia, and therefore thought proper to decline being a candidate at the expiration of his term; yet strange to tell, the assembly of Virginia gave him an unanimous vote of thanks for his faithful services in the senate of the United States. A short time after the assembly of Virginia passed a vote of thanks to Mr. Giles for having instituted an enquiry into the conduct of the Secretary of the Treasury Mr. Hamilton, when it was universally known, that the whole was a party business, contrived merely to get Mr. Hamilton out of office.—In 1794, the assembly of Virginia, after having voted that governor Lee had abandoned his post, as governor, by assuming the command of the Western army (which certainly would have been a very reprehensible act) gave him an unanimous vote of thanks for his meritorious conduct, in having abandoned his post. Last year, the assembly of Virginia wished to vote thanks to the President for his conduct, but the two houses could not for a long while agree on the proper wording of the vote; the lower house were willing to applaud his integrity and his firmness, but would not acknowledge his wisdom; the senate insisted on his wisdom, and after much debate, the President's wisdom was carried in the lower house, by a majorty of two votes. But here, in voting thanks to Washington, the assembly of Virginia were not unanimous!!

These votes of thanks in the state legislatures are becoming so cheap, and so much a thing of course that very little value is now annexed to them.

They frequently pass nem. con. because those who are opposed to them, conceive that a debate would annex some importance to the person who is to receive thanks. I remember hearing of an instance in a state legislature, where a vote of thanks was just about to pass, and the clerk was enquiring whether it was to be entered unanimously, when the sudden arrival and opposition of a member brought on a debate, and the vote was rejected by a large majority.

CIVIS.

For the GAZETTE of the UNITED STATES.

PHOCION—No. VIII.

It has been stated, that the object of Mr. Adams's book was to point out the tendency of a single legislative branch to destroy the liberties of the people. His reasoning in favour of a distribution of the legislative power into two branches, and the establishment of checks and balances, has been wickedly perverted into a reasoning in support of privileged orders. Who has not seen the venomous effusions, and the low ribaldry, which has of late been disgorged from the Jacobine presses against Mr. Adams's system of checks and balances? Who would have supposed, that similar reasoning and principles were to be found in the works of Mr. Jefferson, the favorite of those presses, and the very man who had first founded the alarm against Mr. Adams's system of checks and balances, in other words, his political heresies? Such however is the fact.

In the Notes on Virginia, page 126, the constitution of Virginia is condemned by Mr. Jefferson, because "all the powers of government result to "the legislative body." "The concentrating these, (he adds) in the same hands, is precisely the * definition of despotic government. It will be no "alleviation that these powers will be exercised by "a plurality of hands, and not by a single one.—"One hundred and seventy-three despots would surely "be as oppressive as one. Let those who doubt it, "turn their eyes on the republic of Venice. As "little will it avail us that they are chosen by ourselves: an elective despotism was not the government we fought for; but one which should "not only be founded on free principles, and in "which the powers of government should be divided and balanced among several bodies of magistracy, as that no one could transcend their legal limits, without being effectually checked and restrained by the others."

Now, here we find a very able recommendation of checks and balances; and we are told, that we are not to trust even those whom we elect ourselves, unless checked by some other power; for, if not so checked, they will instantly be converted into elective despots.

Such were the opinions of Mr. Jefferson, when he wrote his Notes on Virginia. Whether his subsequent residence in France has effected a total change in these opinions, we have not the materials to decide; those we possess, involve the matter in obscurity; for though in his letter to Mr. Madison from Paris, dated December 20, 1787, on the subject of the new federal constitution, he says, "I like the negative given to the executive;" yet, a few years after his return from France, this kind of check was ranked by him among Mr. Adams's political heresies; and tho', in that latter, he seems to approve of the distribution of the legislative power, by the American constitution, into two branches; yet he is said to have been consulted about, and to have approved, the French constitution of 1791, which vested the whole legislative power in one branch, and thus, according to his doctrine, established (or, to use his expression, defined) an elective despotism.

The friends of Mr. Jefferson, while they hold him up as the quintessence of republicanism, affect to be prodigiously alarmed lest the enemies of republicanism should gain the ascendancy in the United States. Nothing can be more preposterous than this silly affectation. Those who make the most ostentatious parade of it, are known to be the most anti-republican in their private life, their public conduct, and all their views

It is certain, that Mr. Jefferson himself, whatever he might affect, entertains none of these fears. In a letter, already referred to, from him, are these expressions: "The rising race (in the U. States) "are all republicans. We were educated in roy-"alism: no wonder if some of us retain that idol-"atry still. Our young people are educated in re-"publicanism; an apostacy from that to royalism, "is unprecedented and impossible." What ground then for these apprehensions? How must every judicious and independent citizen reprobate such base attempts to mislead the public, and to defame some of the best characters in the United States? And of whom are these fears entertained? Of Mr. Adams!—a citizen who, through the arduous progress of a long public life, has never been betrayed into one act, which his opponents can object to him; for, it is to be observed, that, although he has been in public life, uninterruptedly, for near thirty years, they dare not attack his public conduct, but are driven to the wretched expedient of criticising his political sentiments, by misquoting his writings. For my part, were I a southern planter, owning negroes, I should be ten thousand times more alarmed at Mr. Jefferson's ardent wish for emancipation, than at Mr Adams's system of checks and balances. Emancipation is a possible thing: apostacy to royalism, according to Mr. Jefferson, is impossible.

I have produced written sentiments of Mr. Jefferson, which will bear as unfriendly a construction to republicanism, as any ever affixed to Mr. Adams's works. I will now call on the adversaries of the latter to produce, from the works of the former, a more glowing panegyrick on, or a more affectionate evidence of attachment to, true republicanism, than is to be found in the following passage of Mr. Adams's Defence. After pointing out, with great ability, the superior advantages of a republican government, he says, in page 95, "After all, let us "compare every constitution we have seen with "those of the United States of America, and we "shall have no reason to blush for our country. On "the contrary, we shall feel the strongest motives "to fall upon our knees, in gratitude to heaven, for "having been graciously pleased to give us birth "and education in that country, and for having destined us to live under her laws. We shall have "reason to exult, if we make our comparison with "England, and the English constitution. Our people "are undoubtedly sovereign—All the landed and "other property is in the hands of the citizens—"Not only their representatives, but their senators "and governors, are annually chosen—There are "no hereditary titles, honors, offices, nor distinctions. "The legislative, executive and judicial powers are "carefully separated from each other. The powers "of the one, the few, and the many, are nicely "balanced in their legislatures. Trials by jury are "preserved in all their glory; and there is no standing army. The habeas corpus is in full force; and "the press is the most free in the world: and where "all these circumstances take place, it is unnecessary to add, that the laws alone can govern."

In this passage, Mr. Adams goes beyond Mr. Jefferson in commendation of democratic republicanism, for he approves of the annual choice of the senators, as in New-England, while Mr. Jefferson, not content with a quadrennial election of the senate in Virginia, wants to invest that body with peculiar and exclusive privileges; Mr. Adams rejoices that we have no hereditary distinctions in America; Mr. Jefferson was desirous of clothing the wealthy class of Virginia with constitutional, permanent and exclusive privileges, amounting to hereditary distinctions.

Hampden, unable to attack with effect any part of Mr. Adams's known public acts, though so long in public life, after falsly charging his book with being friendly to monarchy and privileged orders, relates a fact, as he calls it, respecting this public conduct: "When several important questions, which "had received the sanction of the house of repre-"sentatives, have been submitted to his decision, "as president of the senate, upon an equal division "of that body, he has uniformly decided against "the opinion of the representatives, which we "may reasonably suppose to be the opinion of the "people! I believe," he adds, "no member of "congress will contradict this fact."

"Without being a member of congress, I will undertake to contradict this fact, and to prove that Hampden's assertion is as false, as his reasoning thereon is absurd.

As the vice president is, by the constitution, placed in the chair of the senate, with a casting vote, it was intended that he should exercise his judgment, in giving that vote: and whether the measure in question, had been approved by the house of representatives or not, he ought not to concur, if his judgment decidedly rejected it.

A memorable instance may however be adduced, where Mr. Adams gave the casting vote in the affirmative, in respect to a measure which had passed the house of representatives: it was in the session of 1790; a vote had passed the representatives for removing Congress from New-York; this had been a subject of much contest, and the vote was considered as a great triumph by the southern members, because it was an ultimate step towards fixing the seat of government in a more southern situation: the senate were equally divided on the question, Mr. Adams decided in the affirmative, and on being asked by some eastern member, who complained that such vote had been injurious to the eastern states, why he had voted in the affirmative, he made this memorable reply, which was related to me by a member of the senate who heard him, "That whenever the senate were equally divided, on a subject, which had passed the house of representatives, he should always vote with the house, unless he had very clear and convincing reasons in his judgment against it."

The two houses differing afterwards as to the place, whether Philadelphia or Baltimore, nothing was then done; but the residence bill passed soon after. Here then is a fact, which completely disproves Hampden's assertion, and which ought to remove from the minds of our fellow-citizens every degree of credit to the assertions of this malignant writer and others of a similar stamp, who do not accompany their accusations with proof.

PHOCION.

* This concentration might be the ESTABLISHMENT of despotic government, but it is difficult to comprehend how it is the DEFINITION of it.

CONTINUATION OF

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE,

BY THE LATE ARRIVALS.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 31.

The last dispatches from the high admiral are dated from the isle of Scio, where he remained at anchor with his squadron. He takes to himself the credit of being the greatest hero and the first seaman in the universe; because, with a considerable squadron of frigates and other armed vessels, he has captured a Maltese privateer, mounting 24 guns, with which he intends to make his triumphal entry into our port. The grand signior, who protects and loves him, is enraptured with this capture, which has been represented to him as a most gallant and glorious exploit of his favourite, whilst all people of sense laugh at the ridiculous vanity of the puny conqueror.

For these last weeks past the vigor of the warlike preparations in this capital, as well as in the provinces, has much abated; but councils of state are held more frequent than before, although the subject of the deliberations does not transpire. It is generally reported, that the late transactions between the courts of Russia and Sweden have much alarmed the Porte; and as the minister of the latter in the month of May stated a rupture between the two courts, and the breaking out of a war in the north to be unavoidable, he was very ill received by the reis effendi, when he lately announced that the two courts had concluded a convention, by which a sincere and solid friendship was established for the future.

A French traveller is arrived in this metropolis from Italy, and last from Bosnia, having under the disguise of a merchant stolen into Trieste, and from thence proceeded to Carlstadt, and from that place to Bosnia. Rumour says, that he is to reside as French consul in Modavia, but this report stands in need of confirmation. As to the ambassador of the French republic, who is to relieve M. Verninac, we have not received the least intelligence of him, although the Porte has ordered all the governors on the continent, as well as in the islands, to grant him all the honours due to his character, and to afford him all possible assistance on his journey.

Some of the French emigrants, who, at the request of M. Verninac, were lately dismissed by the Porte, have already left these dominions, but whether for Russia or Malta, is not known.

LONDON, September 9.

Capt. Drury, of the Alfred, who captured Le Renommée French frigate, is the officer who commanded the Endymion, which in the last war engaged a Dutch ship, which, after having struck to the Endymion, fired a broad-side as the English crew were going to board her. Captain Drury rewarded this perfidy of the Dutch commander by returning a fire that blew up the enemy's ship, by which every one of the crew perished.

September 16.

In the late letter from the directory to the minister at war, on the reforms to be made in that department, it states, that the enemies of the republic, deaf to the voice of humanity and their own interests, have refused to accept the just and moderate conditions of peace which the French government has not ceased, and shall not cease to offer them.

But when has the directory made proposals of peace to this country? By whom, and to whom have they been made? And what was the nature and purport of these proposals? These are pressing and precise queries, which we have a right to address to the directory before we place implicit faith in its vague and unsupported assertions. Not only has it never made any pacificatory propositions, but all Europe knows with how much haughtiness it rejected those which were made through Mr. Wickham on the part of our cabinet. All Europe has witnessed with indignation the insolence with which it declined the mediation of the king of Denmark offered by the emperor, our ally. We defy the most zealous partizans of the French regimen to disprove the reality of these pacific measures pursued by the coalesced powers; or to prove, that the French ever took a step of the same nature.

If the directory calls just and moderate conditions terms which would subject us to the same despotic influence as Spain is now groaning under, which would chain us down like the king of Sardinia, and force us to submit, like the king of Prussia, to contributions being levied by the republicans in our own dominions, or expose us to the same vexatious proceedings as are experienced by the petty states of Germany and Italy, the national dignity, the energy of our government, our immense resources, and the dearest interests of the people can never allow us to listen to the like just and moderate conditions.

Besides, the moment is now arrived, when all Europe will be able to appreciate this new declaration of the directory. The answer it returns to our demand for a passport to Paris, for a gentleman to make overtures of peace, muſt clearly ſhow whether the above declaration, like many preceding profeſſions of the ſame nature, was a mere impoſture, or whether the directory really wiſhes to put an end to the calamities of the war, by a ſolid and permanent peace.

The Dutch in their progreſs from a ſociety of fiſhermen to an aſſembly of high and mighty lords, have kept up the appearance of equanimity in their greateſt ſucceſs. A Dutch merchant, who was uncommonly penſive after a very fortunate venture in trade, being aſked the cauſe of his melancholy, replied, that he was thinking how he ſhould further improve his good fortune. May not the preſent apparent deſpondency of the Batavian republic be attributed to the ſame cauſe? It is perhaps employed in meditating how it can improve the happy ſituation into which it has been bro't by French fraternity.

The American papers announce the death of DAVID RITTENHOUSE, the Newton of America.

PLYMOUTH, September 7.

The muſical meeting laſt week at Birmingham turned out very profitable to the charity. The receipts amounted to near £ 2,000. Cramer led, and the band was in every reſpect compoſed of the firſt-rate talents.

A monument to the late lieutenant P. Cragif has been erected at Plymouth, with the following inſcription:

"To the memory of lieutenant Patrick Cragif, of his majeſty's marine forces, who ſo nobly fell in the action fought (between his majeſty's ſhip Artois and the French national frigate la Revolutionaire) off Uſhant, on the 21ſt of October, 1794, aged 36. This monument is erected by his brother officers, in teſtimony of their eſteem for his courage and virtues:

"Unaw'd by death, the noble Cragif bore
"The battle's rage, with honor to his corps!
"Till fate, alas! had doom'd the heroe's fall,
"By one inglorious—one unerring ball!
"When, with the firmneſs of a Roman chief,
"While all around him ſtood o'erwhelm'd with grief,
"His arms bequeath'd—then took his laſt farewell,
"And, joining in the ſhouts of vict'ry, fell!"

The late earl of Mansfield's eſtates in Scotland do not exceed £. 6,000 a year, but the property he inherited from the great earl, and the accumulations ariſing from the moſt rigid economy in his own expences, are immenſe, ſo that his ſon comes into life one of the richeſt men in England.

BRIGHTON, September 7.

A young woman of Dublin, who was apprehenſive of ſome fruitful effects from an illicit amour which ſhe had for ſome time carried on with a Dutch ſailor, mentioned her ſituation to a friend of her's, who adviſed her to place her future offſpring to the account of her maſter, as being the richer man of the two.—"I was thinking of that," replied the fair one, "but then, you know, the child will diſcover all, when it begins to ſpaik Dutch!"

PHILADELPHIA,

MONDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 24, 1796.

In the American, Capt. Ewing, came a number of paſſengers, among them is the eldeſt ſon of the late duke of Orleans.

By this arrival we have received Hamburgh papers to the 20th September; from which we have time to preſent only the following articles—

FRANKFORT, September 13.

We ſuppoſed that the French would have remained in their poſition on the Lahn near Wetzlaer and Gieſſen, but they have already abandoned both places. And as the troops which came out of Mayence have already penetrated to Limbourg and Naſſau, it is probable the French will be obliged to continue their retreat until they get behind the Sieg. The corps of the generals Lichenſtein and Elſnitz have already paſſed Wetzlaer and were very near the French in their purſuit.

The imperial troops here conſiſt of only one company, which guard the gates. The headquarters of the archduke are at Wetzlaer.

The peaſants of the Briſgaw have taken arms againſt the French and have taken many priſoners.

A great quantity of artillery and baggage of all ſorts has fallen into the hands of the imperialiſts.

The retreat of the Auſtrians from the Rhine to the Danube took up fifty two days, that of the French from the Danube to the Rhine, fourteen.

We eſtimate, that the French armies ſince they penetrated into Germany have levied about 129 millions of livres in ſpecie, and more than 160 millions in requiſitions of different kinds.

BAMBERG, Sept. 9.

On the 7th, the head-quarters of the Archduke were at Shauffemburg. On the night of the 7th he received a courier from general Kray, which announced that he had taken 2000 priſoners near Frankfort, and a park of artillery conſiſting of 80 pieces of cannon. The French garriſon of the citadel of Wurtzburgh, ſurrendered priſoners to the number of 1100 men.

September 12.

The country people are daily bringing in French priſoners. A courier diſpatched by gen. Jourdan to gen. Moreau, has been intercepted. Letters of the 8th September from Regenſburg, ſay, that a conſiderable body of Moreau's army was beſieging Ingolſtadt, which was vigorouſly defended.

They write from Augſburg of the 10th September, that Moreau was daily advancing in his career. His progreſſing is attributed to his total ignorance of Jourdan's retreat.

VIENNA, Sept. 8.

The favourable news from our young hero, the archduke, has raiſed our funds 15 per cent. The aſſembling of the militia of Bohemia is ſuſpended.

We hear from the frontiers of Italy, that the army of general Wurmſer has advanced four leagues. We are alſo aſſured, that he would have acted offenſively before this, but for an epidemic which affects every body on the frontiers. For this reaſon the Auſtrians have drawn a cordon on their ſide.

 The foregoing tranſlations have been made from German into French, and from French into Engliſh, ſince ten o'clock this morning.

The papers further ſtate, that the ſieges of Mentz, Manheim, Philipſburg and Ehrenbreitzen, have been raiſed—The garriſon of Manheim had entered the Briſgaw, in order to intereept Moreau, ſuppoſing him to be on the retreat.

Another of the garriſons had croſſed the Rhine, and had taken Creutznach—Jourdan was retreating towards Luxembourg.

BY THIS DAY's MAILS.

BOSTON, October 17.

Arrived Barque Columbia, Capt. Hutchins, 42 days from Gibralatr, from the American conſul Simpſon, he learnt that gen. Wurmſer, had cauſed the ſiege of Mantua, to be raiſed, and compelled the French to quit Italy. A very ſevere action having taken place, the republican army having loſt 15,000 men, and all their ordnance and ſtores. ☞ We conceive this to be the ramification of the events anterior to theſe which are narrated in the letters of Gen. Buonaparte.

Mr. Winſlow arrived at Alicant, about 20th Auguſt. Off Cape de Gates, was boarded by an Algerine corſair, whom he ſupplied with water. The Algerine had with him the ſhip Betſey, capt Sampſon, of Boſton. The Engliſh ſhips in the Spaniſh ports were embargoed; but no hoſtilities on the part of the Engliſh had yet taken place, and ſmall veſſels from Spain viſited Gibraltar as uſual.

By yeſterday's arrivals we have received a vague account, that the French had not ſucceeded at St. John's. The veſſel that brought this intelligence, ſays, that the French fleet were ſeen beating on and off ſhore, with top-ſails ſet.—This we do not underſtand. This does not look as if they defeated.

☞ The honorable JAMES SULLIVAN, yeſterday returned, from his miſſion to the eaſtward without accompliſhing the object of his miſſion.—The court of demarcation has adjourned to Boſton.

NEW-YORK, October 22.

In a late diſcuſſion before the council of five-hundred, in France, on the ſubject of the amneſty to be extended to the emigrants, it appeared that the number of petitions from that unfortunate claſs of citizens was no leſs that SEVENTY THOUSAND!

FROM HALIFAX.

Yeſterday arrived the ſhip Argus, captain Fanning, in 8 days from Halifax—Capt. Fanning informs, that, that place had been in great conſternation, fearing an attack; the militia from the country were brought in town for a few days, and then diſmiſſed; the fortifications were repairing.—It was ſuppoſed that the French fleet were cruizing off St. John's, Newfoundland. Admiral Murray's ſquadron, except the Thetis and Topaz frigates, were at Halifax.

And approved notes, securing payment in either money or prizes, in ten days after drawing, will be received for any number not less than 30 tickets.

This Lottery will afford an elegant specimen of the private buildings to be erected in the City of Washington—Two beautiful designs are already selected for the entire fronts on two of the public squares; from these prawings it is proposed to erect two centre and four corner buildings, as soon as possible after this lottery is sold, and to convey them, when complete, to the fortunate adventurers, in the manner described in the scheme for the Hotel Lottery. A nett deduction of five per cent. will be made to defray the necessary expenses of printing, &c. and the surplus will be made a part of the fund intended for the National Univerlity, to be erected within the city of Washington.

The Drawing will commence as soon as the tickets are sold off.—The money prizes will be payable in thirty days after it is finished; and any prizes for which fortunate numbers are not produced within twelve months after the drawing is closed, are to be considered as given towards the fund for the University; it being determined to settle the whole business in a year from the ending of the drawing, and to take up the bonds given as security.

The real securities given for the payment of the Prizes, are held by the President and two Directors of the Bank of Columbia, and are valued at more than half the amount of the lottery.

The twenty four gentlemen who by appointment of the late Commissioners assisted in the management of the Hotel Lottery are requested to undertake this arduous task a second time on behalf of the public; a sufficient number of these having kindly accepted, it is hoped that the friends to a National University and the other federal objects may continue to favor the design.

By accounts received from the different parts of the Continent as well as from Europe, where the tickets have been sent for sale, the public are assured that the drawing will speedily commence, and that the care and caution unavoidably necessary to insure a safe disposal of the tickets, has rendered the short suspension indispensable.

SAMUEL BLODGET.

CALLED TWITTENHAM, situate in the township of Upper Derby, and county of Delaware, 7 1-2 miles from Philadelphia, and half a mile from the new Western road: containing 230 acres of excellent land, 45 of which are good watered meadow, 90 of prime woodland, and the rest arable of the first quality. There are on the premises a good two story brick house, with 4 rooms on a floor, and cellars under the whole, with a pump-well of excellent water in front; a large frame barn, stables, and other convenient buildings; a smoke-house and stone, spring-house; two good apple orchards, and one of peaches. The fields are all in clover, except those immediately under tillage, and are so laid out as to have the advantage of water in each of them, which renders it peculiarly convenient for grazing.

The situation is pleasant and healthy, and from the high cultivation of the land, the good neighbourhood, and the vicinity to the city, it is very suitable for a gentleman's country seat.

The foregoing is part of the estate of Jacob Harman, deceased, and offered for sale by

Mordecai Lewis,
Surviving Executor.
